

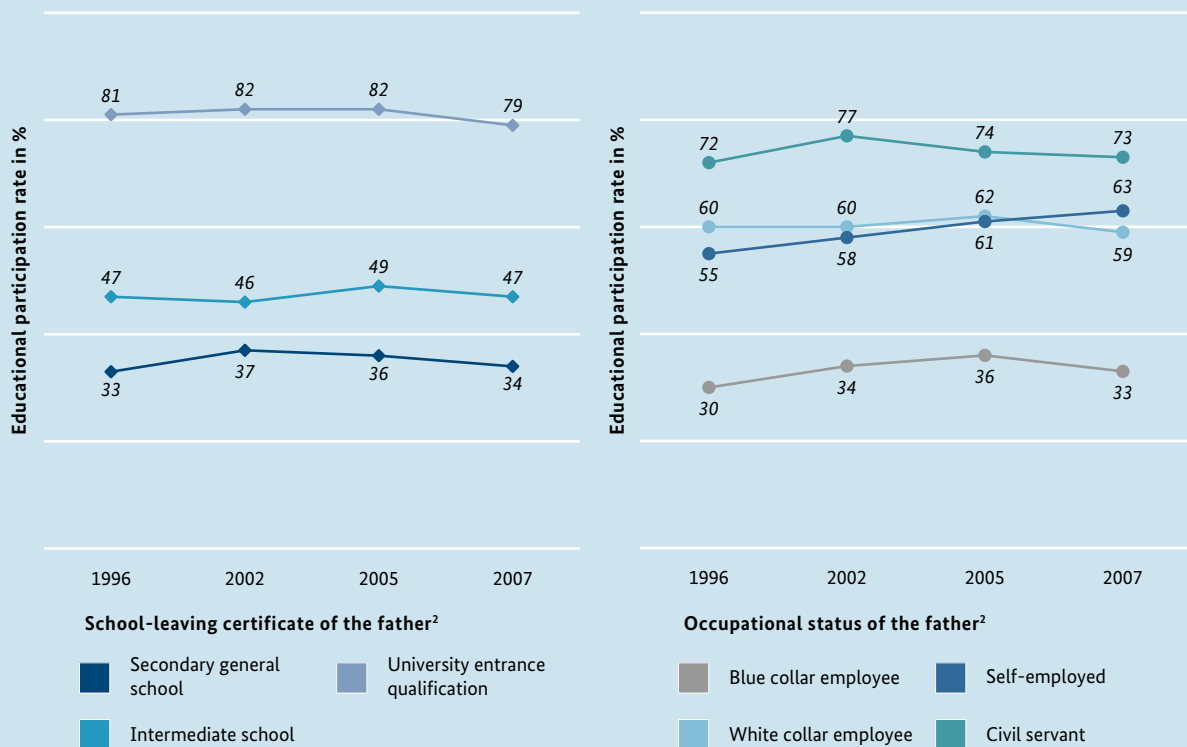

Chart 2.3.33 Participation of 17 & 18-year-olds in an upper secondary level school, by the father's level of education and his occupational status (1996-2007)¹

1) Participation in upper secondary level at grammar school.

2) For methodological reasons, assessments of education participation rates among specific social groups continue to use the concept of a family provider as an indicator of the social status of a student's family of origin. For the most part, the family provider is the father. In single-parent families, the family provider is the single parent.
